RECEIVING CAPACITY

Having a root of CAPACITY demonstrates how much you can contain. Reposition yourself as a receiver. God created you with an infinite capacity to receive—measureless. "Your limitations are not imposed on you, they are accepted by you," Ralph Marston. You only experience limitations when you stop receiving. You have the ability to accumulate more than enough in your container to have an ample supply to be in demand. Learn how to remove the cap so they can reset your boundaries. It is as easy as "biggie-sizing" your measuring cup: you determine the size of the container and when to stretch. You determine the substance for the in-filling. Before you give anything away, you must receive first. You can't give away anything you don't have. Your appetite determines your level of fulfillment. The seven levels are: 1-Constrictor-a curbed appetite so makes no room to receive deposits. 2-Gleaner-a pint-sized appetite which majors on only undersized receipts. 3-Reaper-a recurrent appetite which shows a regular pattern of receipt. 4-Partaker-a by-invitation-only appetite which will receive favor from others' labor. 5-Investor has a return on investment appetite which indicates income-producing assets. 6-Inventor has an uncommon appetite so launches witty inventions to solve problems. 7-Expander has above-all-you-can-ask-or-think empowerment which links you to a no-limits living because your seed sown multiplies an incalculable increase. Begin to commit to sow something out of every receipt. Perform pre-maintenance checks on your container to prevent contents from being lost. It is possible to build a masterpiece with only one piece. You can resize any event to accommodate accumulation or elimination. Here is one way to set your mind on full. "BUY2" identical staples: your mind will remember that you always have a stash. During recall, you will know you possess more than enough, you won't sense running out. Practice looking at yourself through your fullness, i.e., your potential to achieve, then measure out bite sizes of what you influence, so you don't have to just hang on to past fragments, a failing present, or an impossible dream. "Start where you are; with what you have, make something of it and never be satisfied," George Washington Carver.

FUELING SPONTANEITY

Demonstrating the fruit of SPONTANEITY shows your promptness as a seasoned giver. Reposition yourself as a fueler. Purpose in your heart to make intentional contributions—live to give the quality of life. If you remain ready to serve, then proper succession can occur. No generation will have to reinvent the wheel. When you release your passion to give, you begin to look for every available opportunity to sow into others. Compassion is ruled by the power to produce comfort. With deposits made, your desire is to help others more than they want to be helped. You give more than anticipated, so always outperform expectations. Compassion always outweighs experience. If you rely on experience only, you will only look for others that model your own life circumstances. However being moved by compassion as Jesus' earthly ministry did, you will have the grace to supply the need at hand. Consumption is ruled by the power to exhaust comfort. With withdrawals made, you end up saying I'm going to stay long enough to get more from you than you get from me. As a ready international distribution center, you have enough in your container to be a ready supplier for someone's lack. Your sacrifice makes the way easier for someone else. It creates a hedge. Your sacrifice should not be seen by your blood, sweat, and tears, but your gentleness to make someone else great. Sacrifice is not doing without; it is a life-giving surrender still at its best when all odds seem to be stacked against you. You willingly face self-denial to give others preference. On the other hand, your selfishness creates lack because it cuts off your flow to others. It drives a wedge between you and them. Motives may remain undetected, but the work of selfishness is always visible. The seed sown or eaten help define generosity or greed. Giving liberally purposely releases all that is in hand without reservation. You never sense being depleted; desires others to sense pleasure. Giving scarcely purposely withholds from others all that is in hand when you have more you can give, because you don't care if the other lacks. You desire them to sense pain. You don't have to wait for a request for service. Prompted with the answer, be first to ask the question, "How may I best serve you?" Watch this revolutionize your life and usher you into fulfillment of heaven on earth.

Thought for Transformation

Sow and reap with great expectation. "Give and it shall be given unto you: in good measure, pressed down, shaken together, running over shall men give unto your bosom; for with the same measure that you mete it shall be meted to you again," Luke 6:38. If you expect little you will receive little. If you expect big, you will receive the same. If you have planted a big seed, don't get weary and faint. If you received it now, you would not even recognize it in an unfinished state. You may not be ready although God finished his work before the foundation of the world. While preparing yourself for the new place, keep expecting an on-time delivery. The date has been set to "now". It a perfect transaction. You can't add or take anything away from it. If you will fuel what you have, you will receive what you don't have i.e., own God-desired blessing. God's perfect love casts out all fear so you can freely give and receive on heaven's level.

Keep the 2-sided Coin

"Giving and receiving are two sides of the same coin. If you want more love, or fun, or respect, or success, or anything else, the way to get it is simple: give it away. Don't worry about a thing. The universe knows that it's doing. Everything you give away will return with interest." Richard Carlson, Ph.D.
